

Martin Schüler

Born in Rothenburg ob der Tauber (Germany), Martin used to be a tour guide in his hometown for many years. After graduating from high-school in 1995, he studied economics in Nuremberg and Detroit. Having completed his studies in November 2000, he worked as an assistant to Prof. Dr. Norbert Walter, chief economist of Deutsche Bank in Frankfurt. Between June 2001 and November 2004 Martin was a research fellow in the financial markets department at the Center for European Economic Research (ZEW) in Mannheim. Besides he did a Ph.D. in economics at the WHU Koblenz (Supervisor: Prof. Dr. Jürgen Weigand). His dissertation thesis is on the "Regulation and Supervision of Banks in the European Union". Since January 2005 Martin is an Associate with McKinsey&Company, Inc. living in Munich. In his free time Martin likes to do sports (basketball, running, skiing) and to go out with friends.
