

JOHN KERRICK has been involved in corporate training and development for thirty years. Notable affiliations during that time have included GE, Marsh, Quaker Oats, Parker Aerospace, Hult International Business School, The Center for Executive Development, and the executive programs at Columbia University and the Tuck School at Dartmouth College. His current practice focuses on teaching MBA students team effectiveness and on coaching executives and MBA students on the fundamental importance of values.